Preface

In an era marked by environmental crises, humanity stands at a crossroads. The relationship between humans and the natural world is no longer harmonious but strained by climate change, biodiversity loss, deforestation, and unsustainable resource consumption. Our materialistic approach has led to a rapid depletion of natural resources, causing irreversible damage to ecosystems. Melting ice caps, vanishing forests, water scarcity, and rising global temperatures serve as stark reminders of the urgency to act.

COSMOS: Echoes of Nature emerges as a platform dedicated to exploring, understanding, and addressing these challenges. We believe that nature is not merely a resource for human exploitation but a living entity with its own intrinsic rights. Rooted in both scientific and philosophical perspectives, COSMOS welcomes diverse voices—from environmentalists and scientists to artists and scholars—who seek to raise awareness, propose solutions, and inspire change.

Our magazine publishes essays, interviews, book reviews, reports, videos, and artwork that critically engage with climate change, environmental policies, sustainable technologies, and cultural perspectives on nature. While we acknowledge the spiritual and religious dimensions of environmental ethics, COSMOS is a multidisciplinary platform open to all perspectives that contribute to the discourse on the future of our planet.

With the launch of COSMOS, we invite thinkers, researchers, activists, and creative minds to contribute to this dialogue. The fate of the natural world is intertwined with our own—we must act now to ensure that future generations do not remember us as the destroyers of the Earth but as its guardians and restorers.
